The Equality Act 2010 protects employees, job applicants and contract workers who fall within the new definition of disability. The Act defines disability as a physical or mental impairment, which has a substantial and long-term adverse effect on a person's ability to carry out normal day to day activities. Long term is taken to mean lasting for a period greater than twelve months or where the total period is likely to last at least twelve months. This definition includes people with heart disease, diabetes, epilepsy, severe disfigurement, depression, schizophrenia, Down’s syndrome, dyslexia, for example.

You are not obliged to declare a disability and the Estate recognises that many people who may be considered disabled under the terms of the Equality Act do not require any assistance or support. However for those who may, equipment, computer software, flexible working, other support or reasonable adjustment may be available, so an individual’s impairment would have little or no bearing on their capability to realise their employment potential. If you wish please give further details here of any equipment or support you may need because of your disability to carry out the duties described in job description or during any interview selection process. This may include any special consideration for access.
